

UCD School of Sociology PhD Scholarship

The School of Sociology at University College Dublin is pleased to invite applications from outstanding candidates for a PhD Scholarship.

First established in 1854, UCD is Ireland's largest university with almost 30,000 students, including 10,000 graduate students. It is one of the major research-intensive universities in Europe and is ranked within the top one percent of universities worldwide. Further details of the University's profile and activities are available at www.ucd.ie

The Scholarship comprises an annual stipend of €22,000 (stipend increases to occur in line with national funding decisions), as well as a full fee-waiver. There is also an allowance of up to €2,500 for travel and summer school costs. Scholarships are available for a period of up to four years. Successful applicants must meet the University's standard PhD admission requirements and be accepted into the School of Sociology's PhD programme.

Applications are particularly encouraged in the following broad areas but are not limited to these:

- Diversities and Inequalities
- Quantitative and Computational Social Science
- Organised Violence, Peace and Nationalism

Start date: 1st September 2025

The successful applicant should have a background in Sociology or other related disciplines.

Prospective applicants are required to contact the potential supervisor prior to the application with a research proposal of 5 pages and CV to ensure that the proposed project fits within the specified area of study. Further details on the application procedures and entry requirements are available on the school website. For general queries about the application process, please email: sociology@ucd.ie

Closing date for applications: 27.01.2025, 3pm
