“Meet each person in the space they are in at that time and support them in the journey to the next stage, with kindness and warmth, only by working together can we create a better world for all.”

I am a scientist, Biochemist to be specific. During my PhD and postdoctoral studies, I enjoyed conducting experimental work and exploring its value to the wider research world. I have worked as a Senior Technical Officer in UCD since 2005 supporting pre-clinical teaching in Biochemistry, Histology and Anatomy and aiding research specialising in the purification and characterisation of proteins. The students I meet are my inspiration. I have undertaken a variety of academic qualifications in teaching to ensure that I can give my best to them as I teach. The key for me is collaboration in learning, working together to deepen understanding and acquire skills. Outside the academic environment, I sing in the UCD Community Choir and I teach beginners to knit with UCD Purl Jam.
